

Roy Brady's Walk 4 Warriors

USMC Gunnery Sgt. Wesley Roy Brady, Jr. will embark on a cross country trek dedicated to helping his fellow warriors.

Starting March 1, 2015 you can follow Roy's progress as he walks from North Carolina to Camp Pendleton at CombatWounded.org/Walk

"I am walking across America to bring awareness to the sacrifices of our military veterans, what they face after returning home and to share what Combat Wounded Veteran Challenge does for warriors of all branches." ~ Wesley Roy Brady, Jr.

Why He's Walking:

As a veteran himself, the concept for the "Walk For Warriors" grew out of his love for the military, families of those that serve and awareness of the difficult challenges faced by returning personnel as they transition from war front to home front.

Roy's goal is to raise $35,000 for the military nonprofit and singlehandedly fund one of the newest CWVC programs - The Adaptive Sailing Boot Camp for Novices in Galveston, Texas scheduled for later in 2015. Fifteen combat wounded and injured warriors will learn how to sail 3-man boats (Sonars) and compete in a regatta. While at the camp, the group will participate in medical case studies tied to Traumatic Brain Injuries, Post-Traumatic Stress and Prosthetics.

The Plan:

His walk begins on March 1, 2015 in downtown Charlotte, North Carolina at 7:30am with a send-off courtesy of the local Marine Reserve Unit and winds its way through the roads and highways of Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona, before ending at Camp Pendleton in California approximately 6-8 months later.

How You Can Help:
